

Building Your Future

The Home Builders Association of Alabama (HBAA) is your representative to the housing industry statewide. As a trade association, the HBAA exists to meet the needs of its members.

The following are just some of the ways that the HBAA is committed to helping its members and building the future of Alabama:

- Educational opportunities and training programs that help you strengthen your potential for growth and success
- The Alabama Home Builders Self Insurers Fund, which offers workers compensation coverage to qualified members
- Active governmental involvement which insures that home building issues are addressed in the Alabama legislature
- Publications and special events that keep you updated on changes in the industry
- Special interest councils that address the needs of today's multifaceted home building market
- Community service projects that strengthen the social well-being of Alabamians

How Do I Become a Member?

Membership is processed through one of 25 local Home Builders Associations throughout the state. You can become a member by contacting your local association. (See the contact information on the back of this brochure.)

Membership consists of builder members and associate members. There are numerous opportunities at the local, state and national levels for all HBA members to actively participate.

When you join your local Home Builders Association, you automatically become a member of the Home Builders Association of Alabama (HBAA) and the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB). In addition to the benefits of your local association membership, you receive valuable state and national benefits, plus the satisfaction of networking with HBA members around the nation.

If your area does not have a local association, you can join the HBAA as a member at-large. For more information, contact the HBAA at (800) 745-4222.

What is the Home Builders Association of Alabama?

The Home Builders Association of Alabama (HBAA) is made up of residential builders and other professionals associated with the home building industry, such as sub-contractors, suppliers, financial institutions, and real estate agents.

The HBAA was established in 1956 with 330 members and three local associations. Today, membership numbers more than 7,400, with 26 local associations throughout the state. The HBAA's effectiveness lies in the active participation of its members.

The HBAA exists to provide quality service to its members and to the Alabama community. It strives to live by its mission statement:

To serve as an advocate for Alabama's housing industry and to assist its members and their respective local associations in legislative and regulatory affairs and to provide quality services.

Continuing Education Opportunities

Education is the key to the competitive edge needed in the building industry and the Home Builders Association of Alabama recognizes this need for our members. In order to provide easier access, more efficient management, enhanced program quality and comprehensive information about educational opportunities, the HBAA Builder University page (accessed through www.HBAA.org) has been developed to consolidate online educational offerings into one location.

HBAA offers many continuing education classes throughout the year that are open to both members and non-members. These classes provide participants with the opportunity to earn various designations from NAHB's (National Association of Home Builders) University of Housing program as well as for general education purposes.

Other educational opportunities, including seminars and workshops, are offered by the HBAA throughout the year at the Winter Meeting, Summer Meeting, and Fall Convention.
